UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba talked with U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld for 2½ hours Sunday about the situation in the troubled Congo. He later told newsmen he is "very optimistic."

Lumumba said he plans to continue his talks here Monday and Tuesday. He met with Hammarskjöld after saying on his arrival in New York that Belgian troops should leave the Congo immediately.

Fires Raging In Northwest Timber Lands

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Thousands of men, working in 90 degree temperatures, fought Sunday to beat back fires which are eating their way into the bone-dry forest and range lands of the Pacific Northwest.

The hot spots are located in the Wallawa-Whitman National Forest of Northeastern Oregon and the Umatilla National Forest which winds up into southeastern Washington.

Army and Air Force equipment is being used to fight the fire and get additional help to the region. Fort Lewis in Washington State sent helicopters, trucks and personnel to fire areas. The Portland air base equipped its cargo planes to carry equipment and firefighters who have been recruited in Portland and Salem, Ore., and Seattle.

20,000 Acres Burn

Worst of the fires is in the Anthony Lakes area of the Wallawa-Whitman National Forest in the extreme northeastern corner of Oregon. It has charred some 20,000 acres. Two thousand men were on the fire lines. The lines to the north and west were holding Sunday, but the south and east sectors were burning out of control through the valuable timber stands.

The firefighters—who receive pay of $1.65 an hour plus board and room—are trying to gauge out new fire lines on the south and east sides. They cut through the forest with bulldozers and chop out all the brush in the area. They hope this open space will halt the spread of the fire. But if winds rise, the fire lines are of little use.

The Pony Creek and Water Spout fires burned together overnight and now have blackened a total of 3,500 acres. This fire is in steep canyon country bordering the Snake river. Two hundred specially trained Zuni Indians are fighting this blaze.

Other Fires

Other fires in the forest include: The Spring Creek blaze, which now has covered 5,000 acres and is under control.

The Cactus Mountain fire which is still out of control after blackening 1,800 acres.

And the Cow Creek fire which is out of control after burning 1,000 acres.

There are 12 other smaller fires, any one of which could flare out of control at any time.

Here is the situation in the Umatilla National Forest of Oregon and Washington:

The Pomeroy district of Washington reports 38 fires which have blackened a total of 12,000 acres—4,500 in national forest land.

The Crooked Creek fire has burned 2,200 acres. Control is uncertain. The fire jumped the Wenaha River and roared up the south bank in the Walla Walla district.

The Wenatchee Creek fire where a fire-fighting convict was seriously burned Saturday, has blackened 3,000 acres. Control is uncertain.

The Mount Misery blaze is being fought by 260 men. It is considered extremely dangerous after burning 150 acres.

The Walla Walla district in Oregon has a total of 52 fires. Most of them are in good shape. The two largest, each of which has burned 250 acres, are under control.

There are a total of 1,800 men in the forest and 15,000 to 20,000 acres have been burned.

Speaking in French, Lumumba told reporters here: "I have just had a very fruitful meeting with the secretary of the United Nations on the general situation in the Congo. This meeting is going to be continued Monday and Tuesday. I express my satisfaction for the understanding which has prevailed during our conversation."

Asked if he is optimistic about the Congo situation, he replied, "Very optimistic."

Lumumba said he will talk with members of the U.N. Security Council at a luncheon Monday.

Lumumba, 35, arrived in New York earlier in the morning and told newsmen peace in the Congo depends on the prompt withdrawal of Belgian troops.

Has Confidence

He said he has confidence in the United Nations and "we hope it will find a speedy solution."

In addition to meeting with Hammarskjöld, Lumumba has said he hopes to appear before the U.N. "to inform international public opinion" about conditions in the Congo.

The Security Council last Friday voted to call on Belgium to withdraw its troops speedily from the newly independent African nation, but the Council has not scheduled any further meetings on the Congo.

The tall, bespectacled Premier in a brief statement in French said: "We came here to make direct contact with the secretary-general of the United Nations in order to arrange a speedy solution to the problem of the Congo."

"The peace of the Congo is conditioned on the immediate withdrawal of Belgian troops and we thank the U.N. for the resolution it adopted in that sense."

"We extend our compliments and friendship to President Eisenhower and we also thank the American people for all they have done for the emancipation of African people."

Several hours later, L. Edgar Detweiler, the American financier who signed a multimillion-dollar development pact with the Congo, arrived at Idlewild. Detweiler had accompanied Lumumba to London from the Congo.

Detweiler, 62, said he had successfully competed with Soviet powers to land the contract.

The signing of the pact was announced in Leopoldville last week. Lumumba said Detweiler's Congo International Management Corp. included financial and banking circles from the United States, Canada, Britain, Japan, the Netherlands, West Germany, Israel, Ireland and France. The 50-year pact is subject to ratification by the Congo Parliament, now in recess. Detweiler said he was confident the pact would be approved.

Red China, Cuba Sign Sugar Pact Driver Dies After Car Rips Down Power Lines

HAVANA (AP)—Cuba swung more tightly into the Communist orbit Sunday after signing a five-year agreement to supply Red China with half a million tons of sugar a year.

The deal, completed as Prime Minister Fidel Castro's followers prepared for their big revolutionary holiday Tuesday, also opens the door to Red Chinese technicians and a flood of propaganda material.

The agreement was signed late Saturday night by Maj. Ernesto Guevara, an open admirer of Red China who is president of the Cuban National Bank, and Deputy Minister of Commerce Lu Hsuehchang of Red China.

Castro Absent

Castro, mysteriously absent from public view since a TV speech Monday, was not present for the ceremony.

The deal boosts Cuba's sugar delivery obligations to the Communist bloc to nearly two million tons a year. The terms are somewhat similar to those in the agreement under which the Soviet Union will buy a million tons of Cuban sugar a year.

The deal boosts Cuba's sugar set the losses from the U. S. market. But the United States paid Cuba two cents or more a pound premium over world market prices. The Reds will not.

Only Part Cash

The Soviet Union pays the world price—and only partly in cash. Red China presumably also will pay the world price. The agreement says world prices will determine the value of goods exchanged.

Diplomatic quarters noted that Cuba promises to supply Red China with nickel and cobalt, strategic materials in the hands of U.S. investors or the U.S. government.

The producers are: the American-owned Moa Bay Co., closed down for three months in a dispute with Castro's government over tax laws, and the Nicaraguan nickel plant, owned by the U.S. government.

Must Complete Unfinished Work

JOHNSON CITY, Tex. (AP)—Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson said Sunday when Congress reconvenes Aug. 8 it will be to complete its unfinished work.

"I do not consider it as a sounding board for platforms adopted by either the Democratic or Republican conventions, or as a campaign stump to promote candidacies," he told a hurriedly called news conference at his LBJ Ranch near here.

Other women will be added, week by week, throughout the peninsula. They won't carry arms. And they won't ever arrest a man. That job is still left to the male policeman.

The women, for their pay of $100 to $120 a month, will deal with juvenile delinquency and women prisoners.

Good Morning!

Living costs no more than it used to, if you live as people used to.

JULIUS KOYE, 49, of 427 Benner St., Highland Park, N.J., died as the result of a one-car accident at 3:40 a.m. Saturday on Route 115, one and one-half miles south of Fern Ridge.

State Police at Fern Ridge, said Koye, alone in his car, was traveling north on the highway when his vehicle left the road, sheered off a Pennsylvania Power and Light Co. pole and ran down a five-foot embankment. The vehicle was demolished. Total damages, including the pole were estimated at $1,700.

Cpl. Millard Wolfe and Trooper Edwin Smith said Koye apparently freed himself from the car and crawled 25 feet up the embankment to the highway where he collapsed and died.

A flashlight and the car keys were found in his hands. Daniel G. Warner, Monroe County coroner, said his injuries included a brain hemorrhage, crushed chest and other cuts and bruises. Koye was pronounced dead at the scene by Dr. James G. Kitchen, II, Pocono Lake.

Warner said death was due to a heart attack attributed to the accident.

Electric wires from the damaged pole, carrying a 12,000 volt transmission, were disconnected by PP and L workers. The live wires necessitated one way traffic on the highway for about two hours.

Koye's body was discovered by a passing truck. Koye was employed as a custodian by the Highland Park Board of Education.

Born in New Brunswick, N.J., he was the son of Julius and Jennie Spuch Koye.

Funeral services will be Wednesday at 2 p.m. in the Quackenbush Funeral Home, New Brunswick, N.J. The body was released to the D. A. Hunsicker Funeral Home, Brodheadville, after the accident.

East Germans Continue Flight

BERLIN (AP)—The increased flow of refugees from East Germany since the collapse of the summit conference continues. West Berlin officials said Sunday.

So far this month nearly 10,000 have checked into West Berlin's refugee center, including 3,735 in the last week.

Politics This Time

Ezra Benson In Middle Again

EDITOR'S NOTE — Many political eyebrows were raised when President Eisenhower's secretary of agriculture plumped for Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller for the GOP presidential nomination. Some of the questions bugging through Chicago hotel corridors are discussed in the following interpretive article by David A. Martin, AP farm writer who has covered Secretary Benson's entire Cabinet career.

CHICAGO (AP) — A number of political questions have been fired up by Secretary of Agriculture Ezra Taft Benson's statement that Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller would be the Republicans' strongest presidential candidate.

First and foremost was the question of what effect Benson's action might have on his continuance in the Eisenhower Cabinet. Some GOP leaders from Midwest farm areas, where Benson has been under sharp attack by some farm groups, speculated that the secretary might quit shortly after the convention if Vice President Richard M. Nixon is nominated for president.

This speculation was based on the view that President Eisenhower himself favored Nixon and would look askance at a member of his Cabinet downgrading the vice president.

Have Doubts

Those close to Benson doubt he has any intention of stepping out of his post until the new administration takes over in January. It also is doubted by many that the President would ask Benson to resign.

Eisenhower has stood firmly behind his secretary of agriculture during past storms. Some observers believe that Benson told the President of his decision to speak out for Rockefeller and was given a go-ahead to do so.

Influencing Benson's future status as a Cabinet official also is the contention of some that a retirement by the secretary at this time would be interpreted generally—certainly by the Democrats—as an admission that Benson has been wrong in his policy of trying to get government out of agriculture.

Not Angry

The Nixon camp here was not displeased with Benson. The vice president's aides saw in the development a divorcee between the two that they say may help Nixon in farm areas where Benson has been criticized.

Certainly Nixon took advantage of Benson's action at a news conference in Washington Saturday. It gave him an opportunity not previously afforded for drawing a line between his farm views and those of Benson. Previously Nixon, as a member of the Eisenhower team, had not felt free to draw this line.

Nixon told the news conference that Benson's farm policies were closer to those of Rockefeller than his. He said the New York governor was sympathetic toward the Benson approach while he, Nixon, favored a new one because he said the other had brought about a deadlock between the Republican administration and the Democrat-controlled Congress. This, Nixon said, has prevented enactment of new programs needed to solve the farm price and surplus problems.

Sen. Hugh Scott, delegation chairman, told Stassen the delegation would take no action on any such proposal until Rockefeller made a formal request to speak to the 70-vote contingent.

Scott added that no request has been made by either Rockefeller or any of his representatives. The action came at the first caucus of the Pennsylvania delegates.

(M. F. Crowe, of Stroudsburg, is a member of the Pennsylvania delegation. He and Harry N. Crowder, of Northampton County, represent the 15th Congressional District.)

Customary Procedure

"It is customary for such a request to address a delegation to come from the candidate for president or vice president," Scott said.

George I. Bloom, state chairman, backed him up.

"We should not put ourselves in a different position than with Vice President Nixon," he said. Nixon had asked previously to meet with the delegation. The meeting will be Tuesday morning.

Taylor earlier sounded a note of possible disagreement by declining to comment on Scott as a vice presidential prospect.

Plane Crashes In Fog; 4 Die

WASHINGTON, Pa. (AP)—A light single-engine airplane, flying through a dense morning fog, crashed into a hillside near the southwestern Pennsylvania community of Centerville Sunday. The four occupants aboard were killed.

After smashing into the hillside, the Cessna plane bounced some 20 feet and crashed into an unoccupied concrete building, state police said.

The dead were identified as Richard Callison, 46, of Rockville, Md.; his wife, Marcela, 44; and two of his daughters, Sally Ann, 12, and Betsy Jane, 9, Callison, an auto service specialist, was the pilot. The Callisons have two other daughters at home.

Dog Training Season Opens Next Week

BEGINNING Aug. 1, owners and handlers of bird dogs and rabbit and coon hounds may condition their experienced hunters and train young dogs afield in preparation for the fall game season.

A hunting license is not required of persons training dogs on game. However, the following provisions of the Game Law are to be observed: When accompanied by and under the control of a handler, dogs may be trained upon any wild game in the Commonwealth except elk, deer, bears or wild turkeys.

The term "under control" is defined in the law as "within call except when actually on the trail or track of legal game." Other provisions governing such training are: 1. No injury shall be inflicted on game birds or animals. 2. Carrying a shotgun or rifle while dog training is prohibited. 3. Raccoon dogs may be trained from sunrise to midnight and other dogs from sunrise to 9 p.m., Eastern Standard Time. 4. Sunday dog training on public lands is permissible, but such training on private property is lawful only after the landowner's consent has been obtained.

It is not lawful in Pennsylvania to train dogs on game birds or animals during April, May, June and July. These are the months during which most small game is produced and the brood stock, nests and young require all possible protection.

Dear Abby

Shared Opinion

Dear Abby: Our 17-year-old daughter is going with a 22-year-old fellow from one of the best of a million. The fellow called and asked me if our daughter could spend the night at his home. He said he anticipated a late evening and it would save a lot of driving.

I said no, we had never permitted that kind of an arrangement for her and did not approve. So the boy had his father call and try to talk us into letting her stay all night. Then his mother got on the phone and said our daughter would be their house guest and they would be home. She argued and argued, making it very difficult for me to stick to my decision.

These people are supposed to be high society and leading citizens. I ended the conversation by saying that we wanted our daughter to spend her nights in her own home in her own bed. Are we "square"?

Dear Abby: I have been

"square." I want to be in all four of your corners.

Dear Abby: I envy the people who write and say they are Too Fat. At least there is hope for them. They can always lose weight if they try hard enough.

But how about us girls who are too thin? Don't tell me to drink malteds, take pills and see a doctor. I've tried everything and I am still painfully thin. My doctor said I was as healthy as a horse but I burn up my energy fast.

The worst part of it is that everyone tells me what a beautiful face I have. They always emphasize face, and it stops right there. Isn't there something new I can try?

Dear No Pin-Up: Having tried everything, including a visit to your doctor, try accepting the fact that you are a "slim, slender, willowy" (never "painfully thin") woman. If you can't change the frame, upholster the clothes. Wear full skirts and tight wide belts; high colors and high necklines. At least you're a pin-up from the chin up. Count your blessings.

Dear Abby: I have been

THE YOUTH Fellowship Society of the Analomink Methodist Church enjoyed an old fashioned hay ride Saturday night. They went by autos to Buss De Pue's farm, Mt. Pocono, who had a hay wagon and a team of horses ready for the ride. They drove along back country roads and the ride was made interesting by seeing deer in their natural surroundings and farm animals that some of the children had never seen.

The telephone call was the idea of his son, Capt. William H. Heydt, stationed at Colonial Heights, Va., with the Army Quartermaster Corps.

Also taking part were Mrs. George Boushell, Beltsville, Md.; Mrs. Harry Byrd, Houston, Tex.; and Mrs. Robert Trout, Butte, Mont.

The call was placed to the home of another daughter, Mrs. Mabel Nauman, Paradise Valley, with whom Heydt is living.

More Drivers Face Retests In Autumn

HARRISBURG (AP) — The physical examination requirement for drivers' license renewals will be extended to cover an additional 200,000 motorists this fall, the State Revenue Department reports.

Traffic Safety Commissioner O. D. Shipley said letters of explanation will be included with the 1961 renewal applications for the 200,000 drivers.

"They'll have about two or three months to complete their tests and return their applications to the bureau," Shipley said in a weekend statement.

Generally, he said, the group affected will be those who first received their licenses before 1924, the year the state began giving road tests to applicants.

All 5,500,000 licensed drivers eventually will have to pass physical examinations. The physicals, part of Gov. Lawrence's traffic safety program, have been required for all new applicants since last June 1.

Green Reports Dems Increase Philly Margin

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Pennsylvania Democrats, who hope to get a rousing margin from Philadelphia in the November elections, got good news Saturday from Rep. William J. Green (D-Pa.).

Green, Philadelphia's Democratic chairman, said the party had increased its registration margin over the Republicans — a record 158,573 since January.

Since then, he said, Democrats have registered 24,746 new voters in Philadelphia to 7,116 for the Republicans. The Democratic total now is 566,882.

Green has said Philadelphia will give national and state Democratic candidates a 250,000 margin to offset votes from normally Republican counties of Pennsylvania.

Governor To Visit Institutions

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Lawrence will visit state institutions in Westmoreland and Chester counties during the next two weeks, the Public Welfare Department said.

Two Traffic Accidents Investigated

NO ONE was injured in two accidents investigated by Stroudsburg police within two hours Saturday night.

At 10 p.m., a car driven by Howard Jay Casper, 1929 Sterling St., Philadelphia, collided with a door on a car driven by Lillian Harrison, King St., Stroudsburg, on Lower Main St. near the Main St. Restaurant.

Police said Mrs. Harrison had parked the car and her husband was preparing to leave the vehicle when the Casper car struck the door. Damage was estimated at $50 to the Harrison car and $75 to Casper's vehicle.

At 11:47 p.m., a car driven by Clarence Francis, 644 E. Hermitage St., Roxborough, traveling east on W. Main St., struck a light pole near 1177 W. Main St.

The pole was skinned and damaged to the right side of the vehicle was estimated at $175. Both accidents are still being investigated, police said.

Driver Loses Control, Car Strikes Tree

STEPPING on the gas pedal instead of the brake caused Geraldine DeSanto, 20, of Pocono, to lose control of her car and hit a tree Friday.

Sandra Serfass, 17, also of Pocono, a passenger in the DeSanto car, was taken to the Monroe Co. General Hospital for multiple contusions and abrasions.

The accident happened three miles west of Mt. Pocono as Miss DeSanto was turning onto Legislative Route 45024. There were $400 damages to the car, according to Mount Pocono State Police.

Troopers said the youth made a U turn at the Pocono Freight Terminal and was driving east when his car struck a vehicle driven by David Edinger, Colinswood, N. J.

After striking the Edinger car, the vehicle driven by the youth left the highway and overturned. No one was injured.

Boy Involved In Accident Near Borough

STATE Police of the local barracks are continuing their probe of a two-car accident involving a 14-year-old Stroudsburg youth. They withheld his name because of his age.

The boy reportedly obtained the keys to a car owned by his sister and drove it west on Route 209 Saturday night.

$177,000 Industrial Development Loan Being Processed For New Local Concern

Record Harrisburg Bureau HARRISBURG — The State Auditor General's Department said yesterday it is processing payment of $177,000 to Pocono Mountains Industries of Stroudsburg representing an industrial development loan from state funds.

The loan was previously approved by Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority.

State funds being provided for the project are 30 percent of the total of $580,000 provided by Pocono Mountains Industries for construction of an industrial plant for the Oiljak Manufacturing Co., manufacturers of metal products.

According to PIDA 50 percent of the total — $295,000 — is being provided by local banks and the remaining 20 percent or $118,000 has been subscribed by local individuals and concerns.

The company will employ 176 people in its new plant. PIDA said.

The firm will build a 70,000 square foot factory on property formerly owned by Robert Christman, off W. Main St., in Stroudsburg near the golf driving range, according to the state agency.

Final papers to complete transfer of the company from Montclair, N. J., to Stroudsburg were signed in Stroudsburg on June 27.

Moving of the firm to Stroudsburg represents the climax of three years of negotiations on the part of Pocono Mountains Industries, industrial development subsidiary of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce.

Collins and Maxwell Construction Co., Easton, is contractor for the factory.

Officers of Oiljak include L. C. Vannam, president; George Persak, vice president; Miss Gertrude Osewald, treasurer, and Edward McManus, assistant secretary.

Driver Held In Connection With Death

NORRISTOWN, Pa. (AP)—New Jersey authorities are expected to begin extradition proceedings Monday against a Philadelphia man wanted for a hit-run motor vehicle death near Washington, N.J.

Being held in Montgomery County Prison is Carl Tomasetti, 30, driver for an Abington swimming pool concern. He was arrested Friday night and held without bail.

Police said he was driver of a truck which struck and killed Frederick Glosser, 17, nephew of Washington's assistant police chief on July 17.

Witnesses said the pickup truck that struck the youth had the words swimming pool on its side. With that as the main clue, New Jersey police narrowed their search to Tomasetti.

Pennsylvania police said he admits only being in the vicinity when Glosser was run down.

Abolish Taxes

MOSCOW (AP)—The Soviet Union has abolished taxes for factory and office workers who earn up to 500 rubles—$125 a month, the Soviet news agency Tass reports.

Motor Club To Vote On Plan Aug. 25

MEMBERS of the Lackawanna County Motor Club will vote on Thursday, Aug. 25, on a proposal for the merger of the club with the Pocono Mountains Motor Club to form a new American Automobile Club of northeastern Pennsylvania.

The membership meeting was approved at a meeting of the board of directors of the Lackawanna club last week.

A date for the membership of the local club to ballot on the proposal will be set at a meeting of the board of governors at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the club's headquarters on N. Ninth St.

Initial steps for merging the two units have been approved by both boards.

Dog Law To Be Enforced

IN checking the records at the county treasurer's office it was found that 1,021 persons in Monroe County have failed to purchase their 1960 dog licenses.

On Aug. 1, the state dog law officer assisted by officers from surrounding counties will start an investigation calling at the homes of these delinquent persons. All persons found owning or harboring unlicensed dogs will be prosecuted without exception, the officer said.

A conference of youth ordinarily does not attract much attention, but North Americans will do well to watch closely the first Congress of Latin-American Youth opening in Cuba tomorrow. It is being billed as "one of the most massive anti-U.S. rallies ever held this side of Peking."

An estimated 1,000 delegates from all over the hemisphere will attend. Such organizations as the Communist Youth and the "Youth of the Revolutionary Left" will be represented.

Student agitation has an ominous ring these days after the college-led riots that toppled established regimes in Korea and Turkey and brought Japan to the brink of civil war. Cuban Premier Fidel Castro has been quick to recognize this instrument.

Indeed, he has made such a play for student support that diplomats long have complained that students get readier access to Castro's suite than they.

The Cuban revolution has a broad appeal to many frustrated Latin-American young people. The majority of them are poor, face uncertain economic futures, and have little to lose by their extremism.

So Castro hopes to use them to export his revolution to other Latin republics.

He hopes this "First Congress" will feed the flames of an intensive anti-U. S. campaign throughout Latin America.

A Cough's Deadly Record

Delans call it pertussis. Most of the rest of us know it as whooping cough. By either name it is one of the most deceptive of diseases.

In a large part of the public mind whooping cough is brother to measles, mumps and chicken pox—just another childhood disease.

But it is a killer. In Pennsylvania in the last three years it has killed 22 children, just five less than the total number of polio fatalities during that period.

Sixteen of the whooping cough deaths occurred in children less than one year old.

Citing these figures, Dr. Charles L. Wilbar, State Secretary of Health, said one of the main reasons for the number of deaths was because parents did not understand that whooping cough is one of the most serious diseases that can strike infants.

Whooping cough might be unlike polio in notoriety, but it is identical with polio in another respect. Science has provided protection against it. This is the basis of Dr. Wilbar's plea to parents:

"All infants and children should be vaccinated against whooping cough. Then, and only then, can we eradicate this disease."

Parents who take their small children for regular medical visits just about take for granted the four-in-one shots, which includes whooping cough protection. But there are thousands of parents, nearly all in low income brackets, who do not make a practice of going to a doctor. Public health officials should continue to try reaching them.

Republican Dilemma

By George E. Sokolsky
The Democratic Convention contained three elements which must find points of agreement or go down to defeat. The three elements are:

1. The Big City Democrats;
2. The South;
3. The A. D. A.

The elements are divergent but their objective is to elect a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress and then they will try to settle their differences. Franklin D. Roosevelt generally managed to keep these divergent elements together in his person. He functioned somewhat like the British Crown—that is, emotional loyalty to Roosevelt became a substitute for rational response.

The Republicans do not have quite a similar situation, but they too have a division of forces which cannot be ignored. Their division is not as clear-cut as the Democratic one; definition is more difficult. But let us put it this way:

1. There is a remnant of Taft Republicanism which is conservative but not reactionary;
2. There are the newer Republicans who came in with Wendell Willkie and who desire a liberal Republican Party that co-exists with a liberal Democratic Party;
3. There are the Eisenhower Republicans, men and women who are unaccustomed to politics but who admire and even adore President Eisenhower.

Thus there is no genuine Republican image. It was possible in the days of Mark Hanna to describe a Republican with a degree of accuracy. That is altogether impossible today.

It is for this reason that a degree of paralysis has been noted in the Eisenhower Administration which, having no majority in Congress, sought to function by executive action or by agreement with Lyndon Johnson.

It was a tough position for a party and it would be a great advantage to the American people if the next President and the next Congress were of the Democratic one; definition is more difficult. But let us put it

President Eisenhower was not a dyed-in-the-wool Republican. He had been in the army most of his adult life and a professional army officer has no party. When Eisenhower decided to become a Republican, he had to learn the peculiarities of our political system which, of course, is nothing like the politics in the army.

In civilian life, it is necessary for a man to be friendly with his opponent, as undoubtedly Kennedy and Nixon are and will be after the campaign.

In the army, a senior officer who dislikes or distrusts a junior can have him moved out of his way. It was probably for this reason that President Eisenhower mistreated ex-President Truman.

It will not be possible for Vice President Nixon to accept full and unquestioning responsibility for the Eisenhower Administration. Nevertheless, the Democrats will make that their principal issue.

For instance, they have already raised some questions as to the competence of the Eisenhower Administration with regard to the economy of the nation. They have indicated that they intend to make such questions major in the campaign.

As John Kennedy discusses the farm problem, he sounds like a Taft Republican who knows how to use an adding machine; can Richard Nixon deal with this problem less conservatively? He could ask Kennedy as to who started this enormous stockpile of rotting farm products.

The answer, of course, would have to be that this all goes way back to the days of Henry Wallace, but that answer is no good. It will not do in 1960 when Franklin D. Roosevelt is a mythological figure and when Henry Wallace and Rexford Guy Tugwell are forgotten.

It will not do because a new generation exists who know Herbert Hoover as a kindly, elderly gentleman who writes books, and the Depression as something which happened before World War II.

The emotional responses of each generation are its own and when one realizes how remote the 1930's are, the Republican Party will have to face the realities of today.

Peace and prosperity do not mean the same to a youngster in his 30's as they do to an older man in his 60's. I can recall when this nation went to war gaily, singing "Over There" and calling sauerkraut, Liberty Cabbage.

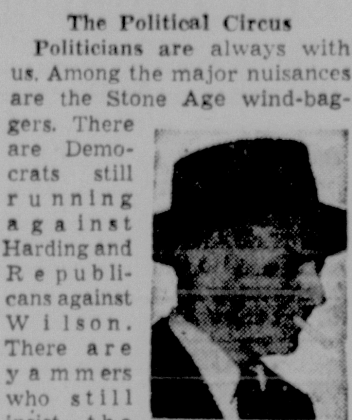

That was a gay, optimistic, sure America that had no doubts about anything. That America does not exist among the younger generations of our people. And it is to many younger generations that Richard Nixon will have to appeal.

If one studies carefully the Democratic platform and John Kennedy's acceptance speech, they are not closely related. The platform was designed to please everybody; the acceptance speech asserted authority.

With Walter Winchell On Broadway

The Political Circus
Politicians are always with us. Among the major nuisances are the Stone Age wind-baggers. There are Democrats still running against Harding and Republicans against Wilson. There are yammers who still insist the Kaiser was wrong while others are certain Jefferson Davis was right. And a few, are inclined to consider you a radical if you don't wear a vest.

Nothing is as irritating as the self-esteem of politicians. Television has magnified the flaw and put it right in the parlor. The forced smiles and eagerness to wow viewers makes you appreciate the charming simplicity of Mickey Mouse.

Wheezes afflicting political oratory are among the terrors of our time. Perhaps it's the influence of the Bob Hope Age. The comic slants are generally as dull as a paintball. Nevertheless, that doesn't discourage the babbler striving to create the impression they're selling rare wit by the karat. After listening to the dreary banter, you get the idea that some politicians plan to be elected Master of Ceremonies.

Thanks to politicians, going to the movies has become hazardous. You never can tell when newsmen will flash a politician's toothy grin while he delivers an excerpt from an address that put you to sleep last week.

Political shindigs inspire cynicism. You get to hear an intelligent discussion of issues—and what happens? You must run a gantlet of petitioners, donation-hunters and the pop-offs of ward heelers. Besides, you can't miss the bore who is convinced that being a fellow party member makes you lifelong buddies. And at the next meeting, he has the incredible gall to expect you to remember his name.

Slogans are fodder for every leather-lunged politician. It gives them something to say when they haven't anything worthwhile saying. Although such party-plugs rarely have any relation to the truth, they attract hoarays from partisan audiences. And no politician would muffle an opportunity for easy applause. There is some poetic justice in the fact that party slogans eventually serve a useful purpose. They have inspired more gags than the tax-collectors.

The emotional responses of each generation are its own and when one realizes how remote the 1930's are, the Republican Party will have to face the realities of today.

Peace and prosperity do not mean the same to a youngster in his 30's as they do to an older man in his 60's. I can recall when this nation went to war gaily, singing "Over There" and calling sauerkraut, Liberty Cabbage.

That was a gay, optimistic, sure America that had no doubts about anything. That America does not exist among the younger generations of our people. And it is to many younger generations that Richard Nixon will have to appeal.

If one studies carefully the Democratic platform and John Kennedy's acceptance speech, they are not closely related. The platform was designed to please everybody; the acceptance speech asserted authority.

The Pennsylvania Story

Moods Differ

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg—It is significant perhaps that both the mood and mood of the Pennsylvania delegation to the Republican National Convention opening in Chicago today are decidedly different from that of their Democratic counterparts when they descended upon Los Angeles and the Democratic convention two weeks ago.

The two delegations actually form a splendid study in contrasts—contrast ironically that may well represent overall contrasts in philosophy and ideology.

To begin with the GOP—from a numerical standpoint—is only a fraction as strong as the Democratic horde that jogged to the west coast. Republicans from the Keystone State have only 70 members in their official delegation as compared with 162 in the Democratic aggregation.

The point is mentioned merely as a sidelight in passing and delegate votes were never mustered in full behind Mr. Kennedy—both were split to the four winds.

All this serves to illustrate the difference in the mood and brood of the two delegations.

Another factor: The 161 Pennsylvania Democrats comprising that delegation were an active "we're-looking-forward" group—with one eye on the administration control they enjoy here does not reflect degree of actual strength. Republicans have set up each delegate as having a full vote. Democrats on the other hand gave each delegate half a vote.

But the numerical size does enter the picture insofar as strategy for example is concerned. It is much easier to "control" or gain a "unison of thought" with a group of 70 than 162.

It is this very point that is striking in noting one of the differences between the two Pennsylvania delegations.

Members of the Pennsylvania GOP delegate bloc are fairly united behind the presidential candidacy of Vice-President Richard Nixon—with a possible lone defect arising from down Philadelphia-way where delegate Harold E. Stassen threatens to go his own merry way in support of almost any other candidate but Mr. Nixon.

Pennsylvania GOP leaders long have been thumping the Nixon bandwagon and it has generally been an accepted item around here that the bloc would be pretty solidly in his corner.

In contrast the Pennsylvania Democratic delegation of two weeks ago skittered all over the landscape on the candidate question, no one having the slightest idea of the degree of solidarity that could be expected of the delegation even after the convention got under way.

The Allen-Scott Report

Nixon Maps Campaign

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Chicago—Vice President Nixon is basing his campaign plans on the belief that he and Sen. John Kennedy will differ far more sharply on domestic economic issues than on foreign policies.

At the same time, Nixon anticipates that the turbulent international situation will play an important role in the election battle.

But domestic problems, he is convinced, will provide the hottest fireworks.

The sharp variance on economic questions, Nixon is telling Republican leaders in discussing campaign plans with them, stems primarily from the widely differing underlying concepts of the two parties.

As he spells them out, the Democrats traditionally have followed the course of using the government directly to stimulate business. The Republicans, on the other hand, adhere to the concept of "using the power of government to create the kind of climate that furthers private enterprise."

Illustrative of this, Nixon cites a far-reaching tax proposal he will advocate in a major campaign speech.

Under this measure, business would be "given a free hand" in writing off expenditures for new plants, machinery, and other improvements and developments. Nixon deems such tax relief vital for the "steady and sound expansion of the nation's economy."

Also being considered by Nixon is coming out for a cut in upper income tax rates; such as reducing the ceiling from 90 to 75 per cent.

No decision has yet been made on this. It's still under deliberation, and what he says about it, if anything, will depend on campaign developments. But Nixon has made up his mind against an early reduction of the 52 per cent corporation tax. He deems this rate, dating from the Korean war, still necessary.

Conservative Activist—While he intends to campaign as a staunch champion of a "basically conservative point of view on economic and fiscal issues," the Vice President is stressing that does not mean he favors "resisting change and doing nothing."

"I am an activist," he told one group of Eastern leaders. "When the need for action arises, I am physically believe in acting promptly and forcefully. Too many individuals, who claim to have a monopoly on conservatism, employ that philosophy for the purpose of resisting change. I do not agree with that."

"I look upon economic conservatism as a tool to grapple with the great economic and social problems of our time. The application of conservative economic principles, in my judgment, provides the best method for the greatest progress. I flatly reject the negative, oppositionist type of conservatism. I am a progressive insofar as goals are concerned, and in my concern for human problems."

"Above all, I do not believe in sitting by and saying that things will solve themselves. They won't, especially in these extremely difficult and uncertain times."

Noting the strong liberal tenor of the Democrats' platform, one GOP leader asked Nixon how he proposed to deal with that challenge. Nixon replied he is ready and eager to meet it head-on.

"The great issues of the day and this campaign is not conservatism vs. liberalism," he said. "It is the role of government in relation to the private sector of our economy. The whole question gets down to this one basic issue: Do we put most of our chips on private enterprise or on the government?"

"Basically, Kennedy favors greatly expanded government action as the instrumentality for progress. Now, while I recognize that government must play an important role, I also believe that the greatest source of progress is through the adoption of policies which stimulate the opportunities for individual enterprise."

"When I say government must play a part, I want to make it clear I mean just that and no more. For example: It is generally recognized that more autos must be made in our country. Private industry will build those autos. But it is the job of the government to provide the expanded highway system that more autos will require. This is what I mean when I say the government must play its part."

Convention Flashes

Senate Republican Leader Everett Dirksen, Ill., does not expect to be nominated Vice President. But he's ready and willing to be. Asked about the matter, Dirksen smilingly replied, "I am a servant of the people. I am a servant of my country. And I am a servant of the party."

Members of Vice President Nixon's staff are saying that if elected to the White House, he is definitely planning to name a woman to his cabinet. They are hinting he already has a specific appointee in mind.

Scared By What He Saw

Dear Mr. Editor:

I live in Connecticut. My name is Jim Brown. It is my real name. I'm mad and I'm scared about what I saw on my television set coming from the Democratic Convention.

I believe Mr. Kennedy's mask came off in front of 30 million people during his acceptance speech. The boyish charm is the mask. The real Kennedy is tight-lipped, with eyes squinting in a frightening way.

To me, the icy tone of his acceptance speech said, in ultimatum style, "I mean to have my will prevail—or else." There is nothing humble in this man.

During the primaries many people watched him campaign with the feeling that maybe this young fellow had something. Now we know. He's got something all right. He's got power. And the Democratic Party was forced to give it to him.

They have been "had." The labor union leaders now know it. The South certainly knows it. And every delegate who had to "go along" knows it, too. I think you and I ought to know it as well—before it's too late.

Down deep, I don't think Kennedy has much respect for the individual. Nor much faith in him, either. I realize it's hard for a fellow who has not lived the same kind of life that we have—and didn't have to—to understand how many of us feel about things.

But here's the way it is, Mr. Kennedy: We don't want to be told we belong to a second rate country. We don't want any man such as you to frighten the daylight out of us by saying that President Eisenhower has willfully neglected the security of our families.

We don't like the idea of a man running for our highest office who stoops to calling his opponent a crooked card player. And we don't like wheeling and dealing either. The kind that pushes a whole group of states around and then tries to make everything rosy by getting Lyndon Johnson to double-cross himself.

We don't like a man who repeatedly likens himself to Thomas Jefferson—the true democrat whose whole philosophy was faith in the individual—and then tells us we must have a Big Brother or Big Daddy kind of government. This is a pretty tired line.

It might have caught hold during the depression but I don't see any depression around now. In fact, this idea is so old that even Europe has abandoned it and wished they never tried it. However, it does exist today—just east of Berlin.

I don't see any of this New Frontier stuff in it at all. And if those American pioneers were here who really knew how to tackle new frontiers, they'd tell you how it was done. Only God watched over them. Not Big Daddy.

It sounds to me as though the Harvard professors Mr. Kennedy has working up economic five-year plans are going to make things pretty complicated all the way around. So complicated that John Jones and Jim Brown will get pretty darn confused about it all and won't know if he's right or wrong. (Or is that part of the plan, too?)

We don't need any saviors, Mr. Kennedy. Especially not the kind that would say to Khrushchev—as you yourself would say—that "we're sorry" about the U-2 flights. Sorry! Since when do Americans who are defending their country say they're sorry? This is the unguarded statement—unlike acceptance speech oratory, that reveals the true measure of a man.

Strength for America, yes! Power for one American who is not ready for it, NO!

Grease Gun Injury

By Herman N. Bundesen, M. D.

Everyone, I'm sure, is well aware of the dangers which guns present. But who would have thought that almost equal care has to be taken with a grease gun?

However, in this modern, mechanized world of ours, grease gun injury has become an occupational hazard and for mechanics, garage men and others who use the machines.

How It Works

A grease gun forces a fine stream of lubricant through a tiny opening under heavy pressure. This does a fine job of lubricating an automobile or other machine parts. But it can mean a serious injury if a hand or a finger of the gun's operator gets in the way.

The jet of lubricant is propelled with such force that it can pierce the skin and fill the tissue spaces with grease.

Extensive Damage
The point of entry will probably be very small, but the damage to the tissue can be pretty extensive.

Often the gun's operator won't even be aware of the injury, since it isn't apt to cause any pain for several hours. Most likely, the injured man will remain on the job and never give the injury another thought until the pain becomes severe.

The injured area is deprived of blood, it is irritated by the chemical and there is danger of infection. The quicker the grease is removed, the less likely it is to cause irritation and scarring.

Such injuries must be treated by a doctor. Since the lubricant might cause infection, it's best that antibiotics be administered.

Just how much the chemical will irritate the tissues depends on the type of chemical.

This type of injury, I understand from doctors who have encountered it, is not confined to persons who use grease guns.

In Other Jobs

I'm told that in the jet stream carburetion of diesel engines, a similar jet of oil is shot forth under high pressure. Thus, persons working with such engines must also be aware of the potential danger.

The more complicated our world becomes, the more dangers it presents. The automobile itself is a formidable enough weapon. Now we have to watch out for grease guns, too.

Question and Answer

Mrs. F. W.: Are the chances of developing shingles lessened if one has had chickenpox?
Answer: Although the viruses of chickenpox and shingles are closely related, and if not identical, I know of no study to indicate that an attack of one disease produces permanent immunity against the other.

"What a night for romance! Oh, if only your brother were here!"

Selling Short

By William A. Doyle
Q. At a recent party, one man bored everybody by constantly bragging that he makes a great deal of money in the stock market by "going short." Do you think he was telling the truth? Also, please explain "going short."

William A. Doyle — more correctly, "sell short."

Let's say that Mr. Shortseller believes that the market price of XYZ stock is going to fall. He instructs his broker to sell short 100 shares of XYZ. His broker borrows the stock so that the 100 shares can be delivered to the buyer. The money value of the shares is deposited with the lenders until the short sale is "covered." While he is short, Mr. Shortseller must also pay to the lender any dividends declared.

Sooner or later, Mr. Shortseller must "cover" his short sale. He does that by buying 100 shares of XYZ and returning them to the lender of the original 100 shares.

If Mr. Shortseller is able to buy 100 shares of XYZ at a lower price than he sold short at, he has a profit. If he has to "cover" at a higher price than he sold short at, he has a loss.

Maybe the guy you heard bragging was telling the truth. Maybe he wasn't.

Q. Please say a word about the Federal income tax dividend exclusion and dividend credit situation. Some members of Congress seem determined to take them away. Do you think there is any real danger this will happen?

A. That's impossible to say. When our elected Congressmen and Senators wake up to the fact that there are well over 12 million stockholders in this country (that's a lot of votes), maybe they'll move in the other direction.

The dividend exclusion means that each stockholder does not have to pay Federal income taxes on the first $50 of what would otherwise be taxable dividends each year. On a joint tax return, both the husband and wife may exclude $50 (a total of $100) if the stocks on which they received dividends are jointly owned or if each has dividend income.

The credit means that each stockholder may deduct an amount equal to 4 percent of his taxable dividends from his tax bill. However, this credit may not exceed 4 percent of taxable income.

Both the exclusion and credit are intended to ease the blows of double taxation on corporations (which pay taxes) and their stockholders. Why should the stockholders get clobbered again by paying taxes on money which has already been taxed?

Q. I leave my securities with my broker—in a "street name." This gives my broker the right to lend my stock. I assume that he does just that when some of his other customers want to sell short.

I recently read of a new Internal Revenue Service ruling that on short sales only the buyer gets the 4 percent dividend credit (and possibly the $50 dividend exclusion) for Federal tax purposes.

This means that if my broker lends my stock to someone who wishes to sell short, the man who buys the stock from the short seller gets the tax break. If it's my stock that's loaned, I get the cash equivalent of the dividend but no tax benefit. What can I do to protect myself?

A. This is a tough one and a hot one. It has all the big brains in the financial district in a whirl—because it may be a bombshell to the brokerage business.

The simple answer is to revoke your broker's permission to lend your stock. That may make your broker unhappy. But it will save you from possible problems with the reenue.

CONFESSION? — Ask The Man Who Goes There!

Catholics go to Confession to a priest for one reason only: to obtain divine forgiveness for their sins.

But why, you ask, go to a priest? Why not confess our sins directly to God?

Ask the man who goes to Confession and here's what he will tell you: Sin is an offense against God; it must be forgiven by God. It is God, not man, who determines how forgiveness must be obtained. Christ plainly pointed this out when He empowered His Apostles and their successors to forgive sins or to refuse forgiveness.

"Whose sins you shall forgive," Christ said, "they are forgiven them; whose sins you shall retain, they are retained" (John 20:21-23). Thus Christ authorized the Apostles, and their successors, to pardon or to deny pardon as they judge the sinner worthy or unworthy. To do this they had to know what they were forgiving... the secret dispositions of the sinner... his sorrow and willingness to repair the wrong done to his neighbor by his sin. Who could make this known but the sinner himself—and what is this but Confession?

But Confession—the Sacrament of Penance—is only one of the seven Sacraments Christ left in His Church. Yes, seven—no more and no less! Christ's religion is not merely a message to be accepted, but a life to be lived—from the cradle to the grave. Christ's seven Sacraments are the answer to man's seven basic needs.

Man is born, but he needs to be reborn a Christian in the Sacrament of Baptism. He is nourished, but he needs Christian nourishment in Holy Communion, the Sacrament of the Eucharist. He grows, but he needs to grow and be strengthened in Christian life by the Sacrament of Confirmation. He is cured of disease, but he needs a remedy for sin, so destructive of Christian life, and this he finds in the Sacrament of Penance.

Man lives in society which needs officials to promote the common good—and for his life in the Church, he finds officials provided by the Sacrament of Orders. He perpetuates the human race in marriage, which Christ made the Sacrament of Matrimony. And as death, he needs consolation and strength for the last dead hour which he finds in the Last Anointing—the Sacrament of Extreme Unction.

Would you like to know more about each of the seven Sacraments? How they can help you to meet the seven basic needs of your life? Then write today for a free pamphlet which gives important information concerning them. Ask for Pamphlet No. KC-5.

Fashion Writers Report Sleeve Length Not Enough

By Judy Dot
Ottawa News Service

Collections yesterday at the New York Couture Group Shows continued to emphasize that American women can choose their own "look" for the coming season.

Each designer has had his own interpretation of the princess line, Balenciaga cut and Chanel jacket. And each has also interpreted the easy fitting silhouette in a slightly different mode.

There have been, however, some adverse comments regarding sleeves. The sleeves are just dandy—as far as they go, but it is far enough is the major question. Winter coats do not have long sleeves. The sleeves on most fall to about four to six inches above the wrist—even in sports coats, which are, after all, the most important wardrobe item for outdoor, icy winter wear. Long gloves would partially solve the cold wrist problem, if the coat sleeves had narrower bottoms. They don't. The sleeves hang softly from the shoulder in loose, never fitted, lines, that is the current vogue. Offsetting this problem, however, is the fact that these coats are superbly tailored, beautifully colored, and made of the finest, warmest luxury fabrics available anywhere in the world.

Originals showed coats of many colors—and styles. The mauve and lilac shades appeared often, as did red, peacock blue, and an off-white shade called "oyster." Huge patch pockets were on some, and fake flaps on others. Yoked backs and deeply cut armholes are responsible for the fluid line fullness. Noteworthy was a camel's hair coat, distinctively tailored, that could be worn with or without a leather tie belt. The belts of leather were also used on a grey wool coat with black beaver collar.

A group of shadow-box plaids in Rodier wool, shown by Harry Frechtel, emphasized the importance of subdued color as a fall mode. The same pattern design was used in the entire group, but each in a different hue—gold, green, grey, red, blue, purple, and others. The lightly fitted button-up jackets were almost hip length. Skirts were slim, but with a hint of freedom of motion.

Box pleats, unpressed pleats and hemline pleats were all used. The princess line was well adapted in coats in the Frechtel collection, the coat flaring away from hidden bustline fitting.

The Nat Kaplan group of clothes in the moderately priced field did something for winter cottons that we haven't seen before. Fine cottons were tailored as if they were fine wools. Menswear grey was used in the cotton dress that would fool the most discriminating, unless she could feel the fabric. The dress, with full pleated skirt, was distinctively tailored. Another in red, looking like wool, was also a cotton surprise.

The clothes in the collection were very youthful and jaunty, making us wish we were back in college again. They had a definite college air about them, probably due to their deceptively simple tailored design.

The use of neckline, waistline or sleeve slits to slide in furs, belts or bows was an outstanding highlight of the Pattullo-Jo Copeland collection. Buttons called "caged jewels" added the only glitter note to a number of suits and ensembles.

The two-way cocktail-dinner gown was shown in metallic brocade. The dress has a two-tiered skirt, the first at the accepted street length, the other at the floor. The flower tier, suspended on a petticoat, is removable, making a short dinner costume. Hannah Troy also used this device in her collection—but in white, with each tier bordered in large red roses.

Another interesting gown in the Copeland collection was a black and gold plaid dress and coat. The center of each block on the coat was decorated with jewels. The dress, however, in the same fabric, was unadorned. The over-all effect was one of distinct texture contrasts.

So far this week little or no attention has been paid to teenage fashions. We feel sure that eventually before Press Week

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

Rome — There comes a time when the normal is so strange as to seem abnormal. The young people getting ready for church while Ruth Brown was packing for her homeward journey — taking her to the airport which it seems impossible we saw for the first time only three weeks ago—watching the plane take off into the cloudless blue sky taking with it our thoughts of all of you at home.

Stopping at her hotel for Lella Bunnell was a queer feeling, too. She looked familiar and not at all tired by the strenuous tour which has already taken her through the Swiss Alps and which will include the Passion Play at Oberammergau. She looked familiar; but the setting wasn't anything like Lackawanna Ave., not with the ancient fountains and ultra-modern station, the Roman Wall and the flowering residential streets all mixed up together.

We sat and had ice tea on the terrace, talking about the progress of the sewer in East Stroudsburg and gazing off at the Sabine Hills, and then, on the maid's day out, rustled up supper and did the dishes. All perfectly normal, but oddly dreamlike, too, after all the lives we've been living lately.

But it's amazing how quickly the unfamiliar becomes familiar. Take such a small thing as light switches. The first few days had me groping all over the wall in the dark because the light switches are located, not at shoulder height but hip-length. But by now my hand, hanging naturally at my side, finds it without conscious direction.

Or take traffic which at first seems an utter madhouse with no speed limits, no stop streets, no guard rails but little humps or markers at the very edge of the paving to keep you from going off on the shoulder even if necessary, and nobody paying the least attention to white lines, if any.

After a while, a system does begin to emerge: the car on the right always has the right of way whether on the main highway or shooting out of a little side street. Except in Rome itself, you can be fined for not blowing your horn when you are passing a car or rounding one of their hair-pin curves. Otherwise it's simply a matter of nerve. The least hesitation or show of fear and you're boxed in, or worse. Round a curve to find three little cars coming at you all abreast and you've got to forge ahead and let them solve their own problem of getting back in line.

Christopher is a graduate of Lake Consolidated School. He is serving with the United States Navy, at present attending Submarine School at New London, Conn.

When the police give driver's tests, they cover the rear view mirror with a handkerchief, since to them the rear view is distracting. If anybody bumps into you from behind, it's obviously their fault.

I still wouldn't promise to try driving in Rome during the rush hours — but at least now I know which direction to look for the crash.

The Wyckoff Shopper
Wyckoff
A.B. Wyckoff
"The Friendly Store"

I am one of the many who find myself buying more and more paper-back books. We have a splendid selection priced from 35c up, in our Wyckoff stationery and book department, and one can find many out of print titles not readily available, as well as classics, in a wide range of subjects.

Fortunately, I love to read, and am rarely found without three or four books "on the go." It is my habit to begin several books at a time. When I weary of one, I turn to another, and it is not confusing because they are usually very different in text and all other respects. But reading, I think, is a great blessing, and so is the mass of information—both important and unimportant—one gathers in the process. No one appreciates this more than I do on those occasions when I am suddenly thrust into a group of highly intelligent persons, as so frequently happened at Cooperstown, or when I have the opportunity to interview some distinguished person in a profession far afield from my own.

One incident that proves the inevitable way even unimportant information can crop up to form a conversation piece comes to mind. Just before leaving for my week at seminars, I purchased a paper-back book, "The Trapp Family Singers" which recounts the life of the Baroness von Trapp and her experiences after leaving a convert to rear the seven motherless children who later became her stepchildren and a world-renowned singing group. It is upon this book, which cost 50c at Wyckoff's, that the Mary Martin musical, "Sound of Music," has been based.

In it the baroness tells how, when she was escorted over the grounds of the estate of which she later became mistress, a large bed of yellow flowers was pointed out to her. "That is golden rod," she was told, "a very rare and expensive plant imported from the United States." I chuckled as I read, wondering who on earth was pulling the wool over whose eyes.

Then came Cooperstown, and a series of lectures on "Home Gardens in the Northeast—1620 to 1680" by Dr. Clement Gray Bowers. Dr. Bowers holds degrees from Cornell and Columbia; has served on the staffs of the New York Botanical Garden, Cornell University and Harpur College. He is also a friend of Russell Harmon of the Lebar Rhododendron Nursery, and visits here occasionally. During one of his lectures, Dr. Bowers showed a picture of Ann Hathaway's cottage in England, which has beds of goldenrod. This is, he said, a much admired and valued flower in Europe... you can have corsages made of it in the better florist shops of Paris, and he horrified the British when he informed them he has ten acres of the darned stuff they can have for nothing, since he can neither control nor kill it.

This made a nice kicking-off point for a pleasant conversation with Dr. Bowers when I met him later, with his very gracious wife, at a private party. He told me that goldenrod is actually much maligned... that it does not cause hay fever, since it is pollinated by insects rather than breezes, but that most people believe the worst about it because it blooms at the same season as many other weeds that do cause allergy. He also told me there are at least 900 varieties of rhododendron, some of the most beautiful being in the Orient. Almost every color is represented in these flowers, and some are a choice yellow.

You see what I mean about reading? How would I ever have known what to say to such a gardening authority as Dr. Bowers, if it hadn't been for my 50c paper-back book?

State Awards Contract For County Span

THE STATE Highways Department has announced that the B. G. Coon Construction Co., of Luzerne has submitted the low bid for a prestressed concrete bridge over McMichael Creek.

The company submitted a bid of $139,065.

The deadline for the submitting of bid had been set for July 22 by the department.

The bridge project is on Legislative Route No. 45009 and is located at the Monroe County Home, Hamilton Township.

Yakencheck Booked In Scranton

EDDIE YAKENCHECK, Mt. Bethel heavyweight, is booked for the main event at the Friend's Of Boxing's Aug. 15 show at Memorial Stadium, Scranton.

Yakencheck will face an opponent from either Syracuse or Philadelphia on the wind-up of a 13-bout card. Jim Piersall's ejection from Saturday's Cleveland-Boston game for running back and forth in the outfield when Ted Williams was at bat, recalls the trick Eddie Stanky pulled when he was with the Dodgers in the middle 1940s.

Stanky would wave his arms back and forth violently at his second base post, trying to distract the batters. Stanky's trick was so effective that a rule was passed against the arm waving bit.

Silver Tray Record Golf Prizes

Large silver-plated trays will be awarded to flight winners and runners-up in the Pocono Mountains Amateur Golf Championship Saturday and Sunday at Glen Brook C. C.

Entries for the Daily Record sponsored event close Thursday at 10 p.m.

The entry fee is $6, which includes both day's golf and a buffet Sunday at Glen Brook.

No entries have been received from Shawnee, Pocono Manor or Delaware Water Gap.

Entries can be mailed to the Sports Desk, Daily Record or picked up at local pro shops.

Women's Anthracite Set August 2

And the Women's Anthracite Open Golf Tournament will be held Aug. 2, 1960 at Scranton Country Club.

The field will be limited to 120 players, which will be divided into four flights.

A squad of 51 Philadelphia Eagles opened practice at Hershey today and included in the flock was Bobby Walston, who signed his 10th contract with the Eagles when he arrived.

Walston is the second oldest Eagle in point of service, outranked only by Chuck (Retiring) Bednarik, who is beginning his 12th season.

A 14th round draft choice in 1951, Walston has led the club in scoring seven out of the last nine seasons and holds three lifetime club records for total points, 631; extra points, 247 and field goals, 48. He also holds Eagles records for field goals in one season 11, and in one game, four.

Passe Catching Days Are Over

Walston had also caught 243 passes for 4,188 yards and 40 touchdowns with his passing catching days may be limited.

Eagle coach Buck Shavin plans to switch Walston to defensive safety. Walston played the position in college and has said he'd be more than willing to play it in 1960, "if it would help the team."

Roger Maris may not break Babe Ruth's home run record of 60 in a season but the man who does, will be a left handed hitting Yankee. Maris fits both descriptions.

Shortest Right Field Stadium

The distance from home plate to the right field fence at the foul line is 296 feet, the shortest right field in either league.

The Coliseum left field distance is 251 feet at the foul line but a 42-foot barrier fence makes the shot a little tougher.

A 43-inch barrier fence protects right field at Yankee Stadium from the foul line to the home bullpen.

Ron Mack To Enroll At Wichita

HIGH SCHOOL All-American Ron Mack from Bangor, will attend the University of Wichita.

Hank Foidberg, WU grid mentor, announced yesterday the Bangor High graduates will join the Shocker camp next September.

Mack, a 6-3, 205 pound tackle, was chosen to all-league, all-state and All-American teams his senior year at Bangor. He lettered three years in football, two as center of the Bangor High basketball squad, and once in track. In the elder and outfield sport the versatile athlete competed in the mile run, shot put and high jump.

"We are very fortunate Ron has chosen WU," commented coach Foidberg. "Ron has good speed and size and exceptional desire. We know he will help the Shocker football program."

Second Slater

Mack is the second football star from Bangor to say he would enroll at WU. Frank Butz, a transfer student from Army, was named all-area quarterback, honorable mention All-American by the Sporting News and was selected as All-American by local newspapers.

Butz stands 5-11 and weighs 190 pounds. He lettered four times in football, basketball and baseball—a total of 12 awards in his high school career.

"Frank will be eligible in 1961 and should give our backfield added strength. He can pass, run and punt, making him a triple threat," coach Foidberg said.

Mack is interested in the field of history while Butz tentatively has designated business as his field.

Pair Win Bike Races

CARL WEICHEL and Glenn Bisbing won their age bracket bicycle races at the Stroudsburg Playground Friday.

Weichel won the 12-year-old and under event, with Bill Bisbing second and Bruce Weichel third.

Bisbing captured the 13 and 14-year old event. Dave Pierson was second and Danny Hill third. Both races were half mile events. A badminton tournament will be held at the playground Wednesday.

Hebert Edges Ferrier By Stroke In PGA

Birdies Two Of Last Four Holes To Capture $11,000

AKRON, Ohio (AP)—Jay Hebert, a swarthy son of the Louisiana bayous, scored birdies on two of the last four holes Sunday and beat Australian-born Jim Ferrier by a stroke to win the 42nd Professional Golfers' Assn. Championship.

Jay's aggressive play on the closing holes enabled him to take the title his younger brother, Lionel, had won in the last PGA match play championship three years ago. Jay also picked up a top prize of $11,000 in the richest PGA tournament ever played.

Watches Finish
Ferrier, who finished about a half hour ahead of Hebert, was watching the press room television when Jay holed an 8-foot birdie putt on the 17th hole and needed only to par the 18th to win. Ferrier, who had come from a stroke off the 54-hole pace with a final round of 71, silently stood up and walked out.

Ferrier collected second money of $5,500 for his 282 score. Sam Snead, three times PGA champion, and Doug Sanders, the leader going into the final round, tied for third place at 283.

It was a five-man contest through most of the final round

Good Approach
The tall, handsome golfer from Louisiana's cajon country purred the 16th and matched Fer-rier's birdie on the 17th, putting a perfect approach eight feet from the cup and sinking the putt. Then he needed only a par on the 18th and he made it the conservative way, hitting the green with his approach and lagging up his first long putt within inches of the cup.

Hebert is 37 years old but has been a regular on the pro tour since 1956.

Of the 60 top pros who qualified for the final round, only one managed to break par, Wes Ellis of West Caldwell, N.J., fired a 69 to take sixth place with a 285 score.

Arnold Palmer, the U.S. Open and Masters champion, faded out on the third round Saturday and failed Sunday to stage anything like the miraculous comeback that won him the Open title last month. He shot a 70 on the final round and finished tied with Doug Ford for seventh place at 286.

Art Wall of Pocono Manor, Pa. had a closing 76 for a tourney total of 299, well down in the standings.

Money Gleam
First it was Ferrier and Snead coming up together in the next-to-last threesome of the day. Snead, the old Mr. Moneybags of golf, had the gleam of victory in his eye when he collected a birdie on the 625-yard 16th hole and went two strokes ahead of his playing partner.

But that was the last time he was in the running. Snead, bogeyed the 17th, putting his approach beside the green. Ferrier laid a 4-iron shot up two feet from the cup and holed his putt for a birdie and they were even. On the 18th Ferrier got his par and Snead again missed the green for a bogey and was out of it.

That left it up to Hebert and Sanders, two holes behind, to take the title away from the tall dapper Ferrier.

West End topped 'A's'

Tannersville holds lead in Pocono Mts. League

FRONT-RUNNING Tannersville and second-place West End both won their Pocono Mountain League games yesterday to maintain the status quo in the team standings.

Tannersville leads West End by two games and only has two games left to play. If West End is to win the league title, Tannersville would have to lose both games. West End has four games left to play.

In other games, Bushkill trounced Saylorsburg 12-6, and Reiders defeated Barrett 5-3.

Tannersville slammed cellar-dwelling Eastern Poconos 25-2. This puts the Eastern Poconos 11½ games behind the leaders.

Tannersville pitcher Motts held the Easterners to five hits, striking out 14 and walking four. Three of the five were hit by second baseman Frederick.

Peechatka, Dunlap and Price were the big guns for Tannersville, each collecting three hits. Dunlap smashed a home run.

H. J. Drennan Presides At State Meet

HARRY J. Drennan of Buck Hill Falls, president of the Pennsylvania State School Directors Assn., presided over the Sixth Annual Indiana Summer Conference of the PSSDA July 22-24.

The conference was held on the campus of Indiana State College in Indiana, Pa.

The opening address was given Friday by Dr. Charles H. Boehm, state superintendent of public instruction. He spoke on "Our Public Schools in the 1960's."

The three-day conference centered on every phase of schooling. After a number of addresses, sectional meetings were held with discussion leaders.

Drennan, in a recent edition of the PSSDA Bulletin, noted that in 20 years, school management has become increasingly more intricate. The conference addressed some of these problems.

The 64th annual convention of the PSSDA will be held Oct. 13, 14, and 15 in Philadelphia. Gov. David Lawrence will address the convention.

Rev. Bollier Instructing At School

REV. JOHN Bollier, 38 N. Sixth St., pastor of the Stroudsburg Presbyterian Church, is a member of the faculty of the Leadership Training School at Wilson College, during the third and final session this week. He is teaching "The Gospel of John."

The school, sponsored by the United Presbyterian Synods of Baltimore and Pennsylvania, has drawn more than 1,500 people during the three weeks it has been in session.

Each week an extensive selection of courses is offered to laymen and ministers, attending from approximately 400 different churches covering a five state area. Courses offered cover subjects of general and specific interest to people in the local church and deal with every phase of the total church program.

The faculty is comprised of leading educators, professional theologians, directors of Christian churches, ministers and trained laymen.
